B Arts & Letters, 214 S. Campbell, presents Celebrating Nature's Art by Gail Rowley on the Gallery Wall and Faces in the Crowd by local graffiti artist John Worcester on the Salon Wall for Second Saturday.

From Artist Gail Rowley: "I'm a nature photographer who lives in the rural Ozark hills near Willow Springs, Missouri. I can't help it; I find I just have to chronicle the nature around me. My past work and studies have been in education, child development and ecology. I've been a long-time member of the Missouri Stream Team Program, and am currently involved in prairie restoration. As artist and owner of Ozark Stream Photography, I sell nature cards and custom prints. I've been exploring the outdoors all my life, and I love to document some of nature's less-noticed treasures. This exhibit will be a celebration of both nature's power and nature's secrets. I will display my art in a variety of fine art printings - some with handcrafted, solid Ozark-wood frames." With Faces in the Crowd, graffiti artist John Worcester has created portraits of people of artistic and cultural significance in the Springfield arts scene. The portraits are small, mostly 8 x 10 inches, done in acrylic and aerosol paint on canvas. (417) 830-8186 www.artsandlettersspringfield.com

C BookMarx, 325 E. Walnut St., Ste. 101, presents April Featured Artist Randolph Dietz, a freelance writer, artist and educator from southwest Missouri, living on the farm where he raised 4 children and many reptiles. Randolph's colored pencil "Cartoons of Eternity" are the result of his human experience: escaping pain and pursuing beauty. Randolph's pictures are of the random gathering of universal flotsam that somehow coalesce into the entities they are. They are drawn without a plan and completed in a few sittings; they seem to draw themselves. The exhibition continues with Second Saturday April 11.
